

New Republic Times

5 ABY

Thanks to their diligent and brave efforts in the Battle of Endor, the New Republic is commemorating the Ewoks, a species native to the forest moon of Endor.

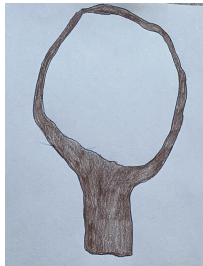

The fierce warriors played an instrumental role in the Battle of Endor. Pictured below is a popular Ewok Weapon, a spear. While the spear may seem primitive to more technologically advanced societies, the weapon is very deadly. The sharp head is able to repeatedly pierce the flesh of numerous victims, and has the capability to retract out of flesh just as easily as it went in. A special Ewok ribbon can be seen just below the spear head and on the center of the spear. The ribbons underneath the spear head, are reportedly unique to each spear and Ewok. The bottom ribbons are complementary to the ones on top and are used primarily for providing an easier grip on the spear.

However, Ewoks are known to use more than just spears in battle. Another popular Ewok weapon of choice is the slingshot.

This weapon is made of a flexible leather and elastic material native to the planet of Endor. The slingshot is commonly used for long-distance battle tactics. Ewoks commonly use sharp, heavy rocks as bullets of sorts, slingshotting them into the air in order to take out targets. According to many Ewok soldiers, this is a preferred weapon in battle.

Lastly, axes are very common weapons among Ewoks. The axes are designed from carefully blacksmithed rocks that are molded to have a sharp, metal edge to form the axe. On the bottom, the axe is made of a sturdy wood that can be easily cultivated from the environment the Ewoks live in. To complete the weapon, a strong cloth binds together the metal edge to the wooden handle to create the perfect, and deadly weapon.

While there is much more that goes into why the Ewoks are successful and aggressive soldiers, their distinctive weapons no doubt contribute to their battle tactics.