I chose this topic since I have always had a fascination with Star Wars warfare and the design of space fighters and cruisers as a whole. I knew from the start once we started this process what my topic was going to be and after watching The Rebels, and seeing the TIE/d “defender” fighter for the first time I knew what fighter I was going to choose. The 3 distinct wings, the overall characteristics, the new technology features were enough to lure me into doing a whole archive about it. I used a couple of images from Creative Commons like the Stormtroopers and the Empire logo, however, everything else including the blueprints I drew myself using my iPad and Apple Pencil.